Prosecuting Attorney Conference Room
Aupuni Center
655 Kilauea Ave.
Hilo, Hawaii

November 4, 2009
9:00 a.m. – 1:00 p.m.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m.

Course Description:

This program is in two parts - the first deals with the rights, duties and obligations of each side to the construction contract (e.g. - State's duty to provide unambiguous plans and specs; act in good faith in all matters; right to unilaterally establish price and time adjustments by change order if negotiations are successful, etc.; and contractor's duty to perform in strict accordance with the contract; provide contractual notices; price potential extra work on request as part of the contract price, etc.).

The second part is using a banquet setting to illustrate various principles - change work, extra work, unit prices, delays, etc.

Who Should Attend:

The presentation can be beneficial to anyone working on the government side of claims issues, including project managers / coordinators and inspectors, and anyone up the chain of command who has input on the decisions regarding liability for the quantum of a claim; design, administration, and fiscal personnel. Private design consultants retained to provide government services and private contractors doing government business may gain some insight on what is and isn't viable, and how to properly package a claim.

Instructor:

Jack Rosenzweig

Jack recently retired from the State of Hawai'i Office of the Attorney General. In over 20 years as a Deputy Attorney General, he was the principal attorney providing consultation and litigation services on construction and procurement related claims to state agencies, including DAGS, DOT (Highways, Airports, and Harbors), Housing, DNLR, Kakaako Development Agency, Convention Center, and Hawaiian Homelands. He led a committee of engineers in a two year effort to clarify and upgrade the DOT Highways standard contract provisions for Road and Bridge Construction resulting in the 2005 version. Jack also worked with the State Procurement Board on the administrative rules implementing the State Procurement Code (H.R.S. 103D).

Prior to the service for the State of Hawaii, Jack was in private practice in Guam and the Pacific Territories for 14 years, concentrating in business litigation. He is a graduate of Cornell Law School and spent three years as a Marine Corps legal officer, including service in Vietnam and as a military judge. He is admitted to the bars of Hawaii, Guam, Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas, Federated States of Micronesia, New Jersey, and related federal courts.
